Unloading the HORSE

Members of a RED HORSE team from the Ohio Air National Guard unload heavy equipment from a C-5 here. The team will join engineers from the Pennsylvania Air National Guard to rebuild the Beira Mar gate and construct a traffic circle along the public road accessing the gate. The work will improve traffic safety and base force protection.

Weights missing at fitness center

Question: I'm calling about some concerns I have with the fitness center. There are some missing weights and some machines don't having pins for proper operation. Do you think this can be fixed?

Answer: Thanks for your concern. I checked with the fitness center, and two sets are missing.

We ordered these two sets and expect them to arrive within the next 60 days.

A weekly inventory will be conducted to make certain all required weight equipment is available. Also, the fitness staff has replaced all missing weight machine pins.

The staff will attach the pins to the machines with a metal cable ensuring the pins are not lost or removed. Also, pin checks has been added to the checklist they use while opening the facility.

The fitness center is one of Lajes' top priorities. The program helps us enable expeditionary airpower by enhancing physical, mental and morale fitness of our community.

Thank you for bringing your concerns to my attention.

To the men and women of the United States Air Force:

I was recently sworn in as your 20th Secretary of the Air Force and became, on that day, a proud member of a magnificent team of active duty airmen, guardsmen, reservists, and civilian employees. You have earned the admiration of our nation, the respect of the world, and the promise of a bright future.

I already can tell you that you should be enormously proud of your achievements, from combat operations over Iraq and the Balkans to your recent validation of the Expeditionary Aerospace Force Concept. In the realm of aerospace power, you fly the best, train the best, and maintain the best. As you put it: "No One Comes Close."

We must now turn our focus to the journey ahead, and be responsive to this new century's emerging security environment. I look forward to piloting that journey with you.

My focus is on developing new strategies for military aerospace power in this new millennium; improving Air Force retention, professional education, and leadership development; eliminating the inefficiencies in how we do our business; and developing our acquisition policies and processes to ensure innovation and competitive vibrancy within our defense industrial base over the long haul.

My vision is an aerospace future just as remarkable as your admired past; undeniable and global reconnaissance and strike superiority.

Sanjoaninas begins today

Public Affairs

Sanjoaninas is the largest nonreligious festival on Terceira, with religious background dating back to the 16th century.

During this era, a nobleman named João Vieira, "O Velho" ordered the construction of a small chapel in the east corner of Rua de São João to honor the noblemen's protector, St. John the Baptist, who is Portugal's most honored saint.

While Vieira built the chapel at his own expense, other noblemen asked the King's permission to exercise their combat skills. They created jousts and tournaments in Angra's main square, called Royal Festivities, which were presided over by the oldest noblemen. On June 24, the noblemen headed for St. John's chapel to hear Mass and pray for success in their contests.

Sanjoaninas honors St John and is a legacy of old tradition. More recently, its festivities have grown to include different events. This year, the City of Angra will host Sanjoaninas festival from June 22-July 1.

AEF prepares for evolutionary changes

WASHINGTON (AFPN)—While the first two aerospace expeditionary force cycles focused on early notification, predictability and stability for Air Force people, Cycle 3 will concentrate on team-oriented deployments.

"We pretty much relied on 'brute force' to get off the ground and went right into the execution phase (in the first aerospace expeditionary force cycle)," said Col. Walter Burns, commander of the Aerospace Expeditionary Force Center at Langley Air Force Base, Va.

"By the end of Cycle 1, the 120-day deployment notification goal was fine-tuned, and we've improved on that during Cycle 2."

The 15-month Cycle 2 began in December and runs through February.

AEF officials noticed in Cycle 2 that the current "unit type codes" -- positions grouped together to provide specific warfighting capabilities -- were designed to meet the nation's strategy of being able to fight two major theater wars simultaneously.

"They were all very large UTCs," Burns said, and were in contrast to the much smaller needs of ongoing requirements like operations Southern Watch and Northern Watch. So UTCs are being redesigned to reflect the demands of the current world environment.

The redesign effort focuses on building modular, scalable UTCs that allow force providers to respond to the full spectrum of military operations.

With smaller, scalable UTCs, many of the teams deploying for AEF Cycle 3 will come from a single base, rather than individual members deploying from many bases, Burns said.

Currently, deployment taskings for a large Air Force wing are spread across all 10 AEFs that make up a cycle.

"A base like Langley would have people on the road all the time," he said. "But now, our goal is to tap a wing hard once, and then not so hard during a second on-call period. This will keep bases such as Langley and Shaw from being deployed all the time."

The teaming concept also means most expeditionary combat support troops will travel at the same time as the aircrews and maintainers in their unit.

Burns said one of the challenges is to define the maximum team contribution a wing can provide before home operations are affected.

"We're telling folks that you have to expect some pain, but we don't want to break a wing," the colonel said.

Burns said airmen need to be aware of the changes.

As the Air Force transitions to the Cycle 3 teaming concept with more specific assignments, some people who are in AEF 5 and 6 may be moved into AEF 7 and 8, or AEF 9 and 10, said Burns.

"So there will be a short-term impact on predictability and stability," Burns said. "But wing officials can help mitigate this issue."

For example, he said, if an airman is moved to an earlier AEF and that creates a problem, the squadron commander could identify a replacement. The commander could then put the airman in an "available to deploy" category.

"We want to be up front and tell the field that, yes, there may be some impact, but this is an evolutionary improvement in the AEF process. In the long run, this will benefit everyone," Burns said.

Additionally, AEFC officials are working to expand the number of people in the AEF pool who are available to deploy from 120,000 to 200,000 airmen. This leaves a larger number of people to choose from, reducing the impact on individuals and bases, Burns said. The current effort to expand the AEF library will make it easier for the Air Force to support joint exercises out of the library, said the AEFC commander.

Once the 200,000 goal is reached, the AEF will be able to source large-scale overseas exercises, such as the biennial exercise Bright Star, from the AEF libraries. The Air Force will test this concept this fall by using some on-call forces in Bright Star.

"If you are in your AEF window and you're available to deploy, it could now mean your deployment could be to Operation Northern Watch, Operation Southern Watch, the Balkans or Bright Star," he said.

Security forces deployments highlight one example of the benefits of this change. Previously, security forces would deploy for about 70 days for Bright Star during their training cycle and then turn around and have to deploy to the desert when they were in their AEF window.

"This blew their personnel tempo goals out the window," Burns said. "When you're a security force troop, the last thing you want is to do is to go to a large-scale exercise like Bright Star and then a few months later go to an extensive deployment in the desert." With the Cycle 3 kick off in March 2002, there are many pressing challenges ahead. Getting the UTCs sized correctly and expanding the AEF library are top priorities.

"We want to eventually get the AEF into a repeating rhythm of activity. We want to continue to improve quality of life, enhance our retention efforts and make deployments better for our airmen," he said.

Burns said education is also part of improving AEF operations. This summer, AEF center outreach teams will travel to Air Force bases to talk about the changes for Cycle 3. This will be an opportunity to get direct feedback from the field.

When available, a schedule of base visits will be posted on the center's Web site.

My pledge to you is that I will serve the way you do every day, worldwide -- with integrity, selflessness, and in earnest pursuit of excellence.

In 1963, President Kennedy said of military service: "I can imagine no more rewarding career. And any man who may be asked in this century what he did to make his life worthwhile, I think can respond with a good deal of pride and satisfaction: 'I served in the United States Navy.'"

That sentiment rings very true for me. As you know, I am deeply proud of my Navy career.

But, today we are in a new century, with new opportunities, new challenges, new capabilities, and vastly different threats to the security of our great nation.

In this century, men and women can respond with a good deal of pride and satisfaction: "I serve in the United States Air Force." And now, I am proud to be able to say that too.

Good morning Lajes

Staff Sgt. Brad Swope conducts a radio broadcast on Island 96, keeping the Lajes community entertained and informed. The Air Force recognized Lajes' AFN, Detachment 6 as the Best Broadcast Detachment of the Year for 2000. The detachment also placed second in the Air Force's annual media contest in the local news cast category.

SFS report drop in crime rates

Master Sgt. Dean Kent
65th Security Forces Squadron

After nearly six months of increased crimes at Lajes, the 65th Security Forces Squadron commander said things are getting better.

During the last quarter of 2000 and first quarter of 2001, community members saw a sharp rise in the frequency and severity of crime against both personal and military property. Thefts increased by nearly 60 percent, with certain episodes of criminal behavior becoming increasingly bold, according to Capt. Ken D'Alfonso, 65th Security Forces Squadron commander.

Two separate burglaries at government facilities resulted in the loss of thousands of dollars in stolen property and cash.

To counter the crime wave, wing leadership swiftly created and implemented two physical security programs -- the Neighborhood Watch and Unit Crime Prevention Teams.

Statistics show military members and spouses who volunteer for the Neighborhood Watch Program have provided a safer environment in the housing area during the evening hours. The program, implemented in April, is operated solely by volunteers.

The walking patrols, armed only with two-way radios and flashlights, enhance police capabilities by putting additional "eyes and ears" on the street. Should a potential problem arise, a radio call to security forces results in a quick, appropriate police response, the captain said.

Under the Unit Crime Prevention program, commanders at all levels, along with their NCOs and airmen, conduct random security checks of their facilities and property during non-duty hours.

They continually identify and report exploitable weaknesses, such as broken doors, locks, window latches and security lighting, to facility managers and security forces, ensuring deficiencies are corrected in a timely manner to safeguard against crime, he explained.

"We take the feedback from our Crime Prevention Teams seriously," he said. "It has helped us identify areas in need of repair or replacement. As a result, we have purchased everything from new locks and doors to additional lighting and fencing. Civil Engineers are also aggressively pursuing work orders, and Lajes should see some major upgrades over the next couple of months."

D'Alfonso credited both programs with "turning back the tide of rising crime," adding that Lajes leadership also deserves credit for making the kinds of decisions needed to ensure the success of both programs.

In April, the first month of operations for both programs, crimes against property dropped from 36 cases a month to 16, falling even further in May to 14.

In addition, cases of unlawful entry and burglary, which accounted for the largest loss of government property before the programs' establishment, were eliminated, with zero cases identified or reported during both months.

"This is incredible," D'Alfonso said of the recent statistics. "I've never seen such a complete turnaround in the crime rate in this short a time period. It just goes to show the impact a tight-knit community like Lajes can have when everybody works together to make our neighborhoods a safer place."

"Our security forces team is happy to have these people out there making a difference, he said. "It is a partnership that benefits the entire Lajes community."

To volunteer for the Neighborhood Watch Program or for more information, call the security forces at 2-3645 or 2-3247.
